Art and antiques aficionados will celebrate the final days of summer this Labor Day weekend at the 29th annual Baltimore Summer Antiques Show, the largest indoor summer antiques show in the nation. Guests will have the unique opportunity to purchase from over 550 international dealers offering works ranging in date from the antiquities to the twentieth century. The show will also include a seventy-dealer Antiquarian Book Fair.

Kris Charamonde, managing partner and co-owner of the Palm Beach Show Group says “Baltimore is an iconic show. Huge crowds wait to enter on opening day and dealers come to sell.” He adds, “Dealers gravitate toward shows that work for them and this show has a great track record.” In addition to the strong list of returning dealers, including Lillian Nassau, AB Levy, and TK Asian, new exhibitors include Jonathan Trace, Sallea, and Gemini Antiques.

The show will offer a free educational lecture series. Presentations will be by respected dealers and industry experts such as Dr. William Noel of the Walters Art Museum, whose topic is “Eureka! The Archimedes Palimpsest,” and François Lorin of Asiantiques, who will speak on “The Golden Age of Glassmaking in China.” A full listing of the seven speakers and their topics is available on the website.

Mark your calendars for the inaugural Dallas International Art, Antique & Jewelry Show, Dallas Convention Center, Dallas, Texas, November 5-9, 2009. Call 561.822.5440 or visit www.dallasfallshow.com.
